I travel in remote areas quite often where there is little or no decent radio available. XM Radio lets me listen to what I want when I want. Also, when I am in cities where XM Radio offers local traffic and weather I don't have to search all over the dial for critical traffic information or wait until some scheduled time. I know right where to find it. I pay for this service because of the quality programming it provides. I should have the right to be able to know it is going to be there when I need it.
